Mark Your Calendars for Fall Conference

Monday, Aug. 18 through Friday, Aug. 22 / Various Times / Online & In-Person

Mark your calendars: Fall Conference Week kicks off Monday, Aug. 18. The day begins with a virtual video welcome from Interim President Iris S. Levine, followed by the Years of Service ceremony in the BSC, Academic Affairs Forum and a full lineup of workshops. Connect with colleagues over a complimentary breakfast or lunch at Centerpointe — available to faculty and staff Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 18 to 20. Also on the schedule: all-college meetings, department meetings, and the Resource and Club Fair. Reconnect, recharge and launch the new academic year together. Visit the Fall Conference website for updates — more details coming soon via web and email.

This is just the tip of the iceberg. For more happenings on campus and more information about how to submit to this newsletter, see the attached PDF.

July Transition for Payroll Deduction Parking Permit Holders

Per an announcement shared by Parking & Transportation Services, parking permit renewals for FY25/26 are expected to arrive to your mailing address no later than Friday, July 11. To ensure a smooth transition, current parking permits will remain valid and honored until Thursday, July 31. Please continue to display your existing permit as usual. Also, please note that moving forward, payroll deduction parking permits will no longer expire. Instead, they will remain valid for the entire duration of your payroll deduction enrollment with the university. This change is designed to simplify the process and eliminate the need for annual renewals for payroll deduction permit holders. For questions, contact the Parking & Transportation Services office at parking@cpp.edu.

2024 Campus Water Quality Report Released

Facilities Planning & Management has issued the state-mandated campus 2024 Water Quality Report. The in-depth report covers testing of campus water between Jan. 1, 2024, and Dec. 31, 2024 and contains important information about the quality of the drinking water supply and the university's efforts to continue to provide the highest quality water. In 2024, Cal Poly Pomona's drinking water met or exceeded all drinking water health standards of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the State of California. The drinking water delivered to the campus community in 2024 met or exceeded the standards established by these federal and state agencies. This annual report fully complies with the regulations of the 1996 Safe Drinking Water Act.

Engineering Tech? Engineering Student Experience Podcast

In episode 38 of the Engineering Student Experience Podcast, Professor Paul Nissenson explores the field of engineering technology by interviewing Professors Farhana Abedin and Gerald Herder, faculty members in the Electromechanical Engineering Technology Department. Professors Abedin and Herder break down the differences between traditional engineering programs (mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, civil engineering, etc.) and the things that distinguish each engineering technology program — discussing the types of courses engineering technology students take, the types of jobs available to engineering technology students in both industry and government, and more. IN THE NEWS

Andrea Velez ('16, apparel merchandising and management), a U.S. citizen, was released from ICE custody two days after she was detained by federal agents on her way to her office in downtown Los Angeles. Viral videos that circulated online showed Velez's arrest and a group of Los Angeles police officers and ICE agents surrounding her amidst outraged witnesses. The Department of Homeland Security said Velez was taken into custody when she "forcefully obstructed an ICE officer," a claim her family denies.

Unlike the Tin Man in the Wizard of Oz, we all have hearts – and understanding how they work is simpler than you'd think. These young learners are seeing this mechanism in action during one of many Science Discovery Camps, thanks to this DIY demonstration from CPP students.
