also, podcast, TV and online categories. Her finalists was published this spring, with the winners announced on June 25 at gala dinner in the Crystal Ballroom of the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel.

In addition to Burke's achievements, the Beverly Hills Courier also shared in one of the most important literary awards of the evening. Beverly Hills Courier Advisory Board Member Giselle Fernandez from Spectrum News 1 received one of two Lifetime Achievement Awards for Impact on Media.

Fernandez was introduced by actress and humanitarian Sharon Stone, who cited a critical role the media play as truth-tellers. She lauded her longtime friend and mentor as a courageous and tenacious duty role model.

Fernandez's accomplishments as a multi-faceted award-winning correspondent and author are well known. But it is her second act in journalism that is particularly impressive. After leaving journalism for years, she returned to television in 2008, to a newly-created Spectrum News network. The five years hence, Fernandez's passion for telling stories has helped to propel the network into a hyper-news powerhouse.

Fernandez continues to win awards including two Los Angeles Press Club awards of the Year honors in this latest year of her career. She currently appears on the Spectrum News 1 "Four Morning" broadcast, on the weekly "L.A. Stories With Giselle Fernandez" series, as well as on her "L.A. Stories Unfiltered" podcast.

Additional awards of note presented during the evening included the Guardian Award for First Amendment Contributions, which went to Steve Tchekmedyian of the Los Angeles Times, who famously stood up to the intimidation tactics of former LA County Sheriff Alex Villanueva. The Daniel Pearl Award for Courage and Integrity in Journalism went to philosopher, writer and filmmaker Bernard Henri Lévy. And the Joseph M. Quinn Award for Lifetime Achievement went to David Ono from ABC7.

The Los Angeles Press Club is more than a century old, with a membership of some 1,000 strong. The organization is now more than ever an ardent advocate of the rights of journalists in Southern California and throughout the globe. On a day when an attempted coup in Russia sent shock waves around the world, the fair of journalists covering world hot spots was no exception at the awards dinner. Fittingly, the royal blue and yellow flowers on table centerpieces were designed as tributes to Ukraine, where more than 17 journalists have been killed during the conflict with Russia. The evening event was dedicated to all Ukrainian journalists as well as Wall Street Journal reporter Evan Gershkovich, who is currently wrongfully detained in Russia. ■

all started to shoot in Budapest, where, amidst, thousands of people were killed."

While continuing to treat patients, Berci established the first experimental surgery program in Europe, before winning a Rockefeller Fellowship in Australia, where he practiced until 1967 when he was invited to serve as a visiting fellow at Cedars-Sinai Hospital.

Now an esteemed and beloved professor emeritus, Berci has served on Cedars' faculty since 1970.

After recounting the two tragic catastrophes that Berci early experienced in his life, the esteemed doctor emphasized the duties of Beverly Hills residents "to improve the situation of the rising authoritarian in this country."

"We have to really improve the education of the younger generation," he said before thanking Gold, who then presented the inspiring doctor with a "People Helping People" certificate that honored "his lifetime of remarkable accomplishments of advancing the science of medicine and for his remarkable dedication for helping patients around the world." ■ reasonably regulated in several ways, including via zoning requirements, security or public health and safety requirements, licensing requirements and imposing or collecting taxes on retail sales of medicinal cannabis occurring within the city.

The discussion at the June 26 special meeting also included Planning Commission Chair Myra Demme and Beverly Hills Assistant City Manager Ryan Goldich. Each weighed in on what they wanted to include in the update to the city code in response to SB 138. In addition to allowing for the non-storefront retail sale by delivery of medical cannabis—the minimum required by the new state law—city leaders want to allow for in-person sales and delivery from a storefront in Beverly Hills.

The consensus was against storefronts. In fact, participants spoke in favor of putting in place the most stringent restrictions possible while abiding by the new state law.

Failure to take any action at all could, according to a city memorandum, lead to legal consequences. Senate Bill 138 empowers several entities to take civil action if they believe the city's regulations to prohibit access to medicinal marijuana are not reasonable.

These entities include qualified patients and their caregivers, the state attorney general, and medical cannabis businesses.

Bosse expressed concerns about enforcement once the state law goes into effect, saying she believed not all of those with prescriptions for medicinal marijuana would have "legally valid prescriptions."

Goldich, however, attempted to alleviate that specific concern, saying he "imagined it would be very unlikely someone would take the step to get a fraudulent prescription for it," given how widely available it is in surrounding areas.

Going forward, an ordinance regarding updates to the municipal code in response to the new law will be drafted by the Planning Commission before it goes to the City Council.

One could argue Wiener's legislation undermines the power of a city to regulate its own commercial activities.

Nevertheless, Demme told the Courier, Beverly Hills is committed to adhering to the rules.

"I don't know what the cache of a Beverly Hills address will do for medical marijuana, but this is the law," she said, "and we have to follow the law." ■

L.A.'s African American history celebrated with new historic landmark nominations

At a community event headlined by Kamau Abdul Karim, the city of Los Angeles' Office of Historic Resources (OHR) and Getty announced June 20 four new historic buildings that will be brought forward for nomination as city landmarks (Historic Cultural Monuments), all of which represent a piece of the region's African American history.

The designations are the result of the ongoing work of African American Historic Places, Los Angeles (AAHP-LA), formerly Los Angeles African American Historic Places Project, launched by the city and Getty in 2021 to identify, protect and celebrate the city's Black heritage.

"The most exciting part of the project for me is doing the work to identify more historic sites associated with African Americans."

Rita Colwell, assistant project specialist at the Getty Conservation Institute and project leader of the AAHP-LA project

The announcement was announced at a kickoff community engagement event for the project, where Abdul Karim was interviewed by his longtime business partner Deborah Mervin. They discussed his personal connection to the history of the Central Avenue jazz corridor as well as the potential to research hidden stories of African American history through AAHP-LA.

Attendees learned about the project, met community leaders, historic preservation advocates and cultural institutions, and shared personal connections to the places that are important to them.

"I am honored for the opportunity to add to the work that city and business and residents are already doing with respect to connecting the hidden history of African Americans into the larger narrative of Los Angeles history," said Rita Colwell, assistant project specialist at the Getty Conservation Institute and project leader of the AAHP-LA project. "The most exciting part of the project for me is doing the work to identify more historic sites associated with African Americans in a way that I hope will be more meaningful to the communities where they are found, because they will be leading the way."

From the residence of former Los Angeles mayor Tom Bradley to a beloved community headquarters in Hollywood, the buildings nominated represent the many ways in which African American history was made throughout the city.

The buildings include: California Eagle Office, located at 4071-4075 S. Central Ave.; First African Methodist Episcopal Church, located at 2275 S. Marwood Blvd.; Styles-Ville Beauty & Barber Shop, located at 2384 Van Ness Blvd.; and Tom and Ethel Bradley Residence, located at 3807 Wilshire Ave.

For information about the project, visit getty.org/african-american-historic-places.

The Tom and Ethel Bradley residence has been nominated as a Los Angeles city landmark.

GMCLA honors the music of Disney at downtown concert hall

The Gay Men's Chorus of Los Angeles performed in Disney Parks concert on June 24 and 25 at Walt Disney Concert Hall. Among the tunes the group paid tribute to included "Misty Mountain," "Cinderella" and "The Lion King." Member Matthew Lomax, pictured, performed the Oscar-winning song "Remember Me" from the film "Coco." For information about the chorus, visit gmcla.org.
