Consumer Confidence Report Electronic Delivery Certification

Water systems utilizing electronic distribution methods for CCR delivery must complete this page by checking all items that apply and fill-in where appropriate.

- ☐ Water system mailed a notification that the CCR is available and provides a direct URL to the CCR on a publicly available website where it can be viewed (attach a copy of the mailed CCR notification). URL:
www._____
- ☒ Water system emailed a notification that the CCR is available and provides a direct URL to the CCR on a publicly available site on the Internet where it can be viewed (attach a copy of the emailed CCR notification). URL:
www.soquelcreekwater.org/waterqualityreport.
- ☐ Water system emailed the CCR as an electronic file email attachment.
- ☐ Water system emailed the CCR text and tables inserted or embedded into the body of an email, not as an attachment (attach a copy of the emailed CCR).
- ☐ Requires prior DDW review and approval. Water system utilized other electronic delivery method that meets the direct delivery requirement.

Provide a brief description of the water system's electronic delivery procedures and include how the water system ensures delivery to customers unable to receive electronic delivery.

Soquel Creek Water District sent out an email with a link to the CCR in the May 7, 2025
Newsletter, and announced its availability in a Facebook post on the same date.
It was also sent out to all customers through the billing cycle in the preferred format for each customer (8,749 paper bills and 5,917 electronic bills). After the first email announcement in the newsletter several customers requested hard copies and these were mailed to them. The link to the CCR was published in two local newspapers
(the Time Publishing Group Capitola/Soquel Times and Aptos Times June 2025).

This form is provided as a convenience and may be used to meet the certification requirement of section 64483(c) of the California Code of Regulations.

On Art & Golf: The Shift From Mechanics to Flow

By Joe Ortiz

Editor's note: This is the 10th in a series.

Whether you're playing golf or creating a work of art, you're probably using some of the same techniques to find the groove.

In both disciplines, it's often the case that we think, then we feel. We calculate, then we go. We ponder, then relinquish thought and hit the ball—or put pen to paper or brush to canvas. This game of opposites comes down to learning to live in both worlds.

But does one side of this mental tug-of-war finally win the battle? Pro golfer Sam Speed ("Slammy" Sammy) used to say, "Dance with the one you bring to the dance," meaning you can't fix your swing during a round, trust your instincts, tools, and abilities under pressure. Ultimately, in golf or in creative work, flow—not technique—must dominate.

In fact, even though technique is what starts the creative process in motion or invites us to the dance, the dancing must be fluid. As Kamen Nicolaidis tells us in The Natural Way to Dance, "You will paint well when you are able to forget that you are painting at all."

And Sam Speed might add, "Stop thinking and let 'er rip."

So, how can we be aware of the mechanics but let them go? One approach is to ignore mechanics altogether.

Author Sarah Rabbin has said that "to create from beneath the controlled, linear patterns of the conscious mind," we should listen to Anne Dillard: "Aim for the chopping block," or to Natalie Goldberg: "Go for the jugular."

That's what "freewriting" and "slat-drafting" and "automatic writing" are all about: this free-wheeling attitude is designed to help us flip over to feeling and impulse instantaneously, without overthinking.

Certainly these automatic writing practices can help us let go before we begin. For example, when singers first perform a song in rehearsals, stage director Greg Fritsch tells them to "Make a mess of it." He's not being sarcastic or facetious. Greg knows that most good singers have already ingrained their technical chops, so he asks them to forget technique and "go for it."
