What's in Vallejo's Annual Water Quality Report?

Each year, the City of Vallejo publishes its Annual Water Quality Report, also known as a Consumer Confidence Report. This report gives customers an inside look at Vallejo's drinking water: where it comes from, how it is treated, what it is tested for, and how the results compare with state and federal drinking water standards.

The report is designed to make water quality information clear and accessible. It includes information about Vallejo's water sources, the treatment processes used at our water treatment plants, and the extensive testing completed throughout the year to help ensure drinking water quality and safety. It also explains common water quality terms and includes easy-to-read tables showing the results of water quality monitoring.

One of the most important takeaways from this year's report is that, as in previous years, the City of Vallejo remained in full compliance with all state and federal drinking water standards in 2025. Water quality professionals collected and analyzed thousands of samples throughout the year to verify compliance, monitor water quality, and ensure Vallejo's drinking water met all health and safety requirements before reaching customers' taps.

The report also includes information about lead and copper monitoring, source water assessments for Lake Berryessa and the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta, treatment processes, and ongoing corrosion control programs that help protect water quality throughout the distribution system. Customers can learn how water is tested, what the results mean, and the steps the Water Department takes every day to provide safe, reliable drinking water.

This year's report also includes especially good news regarding PFAS, often referred to as "forever chemicals." As part of federally required monitoring, Vallejo tested for 29 different PFAS compounds. None were detected in samples from either the Vallejo Water System or the Lakes Water System. In addition, none of the six specific PFAS compounds now subject to new federal drinking water standards were detected.

Annual water quality reports are required by state and federal drinking water regulations and are an important part of public transparency. By making this information available, customers can see how carefully Vallejo's drinking water is monitored, tested, treated, and protected throughout the year.

Vallejo's Annual Water Quality Report is available online at cityofvallejo.net/waterquality

Customers who would like a printed copy, have questions about the report, or would like additional information about drinking water quality may contact Vidia Gillula, Water Quality Manager, at (707) 649-3472 or vidia.gillula@cityofvallejo.net.
